"Gum Shoe" Campaign In Bourbon.

The McCreary men in Bourbon county must not go to sleep and let Beckham cut down the large majority that this county should give McCreary. There are several of the shrewdest politicians in our county for Beckham who have been conducting a "gum shoe" campaign for several weeks, and the McCreary people must not think for a moment that the Beckham forces will not have an organization in Bourbon. No stone is being left unturned in the efforts of these Beckham leaders here to carry the county for him, but it is the consensus of opinion that these few politicians have got the biggest job on their hands imaginable when they attempt to carry Bourbon county for Beckham against McCreary.

If anyone will show us where Beckham has a single qualification to represent Kentucky in the United States Senate, we would almost be persuaded to vote for him. The trouble is that this young man has just entered a race where he is outclassed. There is no class surely in the Senate that he could enter, and as it has been said "nobody there to play with him." The truth of the matter is that the Beckham-Haley-Hager machine elected Paynter so easily that they lost their heads, and actually believed that they can ease Beckham into a Senator's chair. The very gall of this machine gang is enough to make the famous government mule blush. Why the next time they will run Percy Haley for Governor. There is no telling what they would do to carry their own selfish ends. When it comes to a few men of this stamp dictating to the people who shall represent them in State and National offices, it is truly time for the people to rise in their might and put them out of business, and we firmly believe they will do it in November. Let old Bourbon do her part along this line anyway.

A Dangerous Man.

Although Wm. Jennings Bryan is not a candidate for office he is now described as a dangerous man," and it is noticed that this description comes from men who in 1896 claimed that the Hydes, the McCurdys and the Depews stood for National Honor. He was also thus described in 1896, and if you will refer to several of his speeches delivered in that memorable campaign, one can readily see that he is a dangerous man," not for the great common people but for the trusts and big thieves that are sapping the life blood of this great country.

For instance, in a speech delivered at Battery D, Chicago, during the 1896 campaign, Mr. Bryan said:

"They tell you that I will not enforce the law. My friends, the fear of these people is not that I will refuse to enforce the law; their fear is that I will enforce the law. They know that I entertain old fashioned ideas upon this subject, and that according to my ideas the big criminals should wear striped clothes as well as the little criminals. I want to say that I believe in enforce-ing the law against all classes of society, and those who believe in that policy are better friends of the government than those who would make scapegoats of little criminals and then let the big ones run at large to run the government itself. The very men who would suffer most from the enforcement of law are the ones who seem to be most troubled. They are not afraid that I will encourage lawlessness, but they know that if I am elected, the trusts will not select the attorney general."

At Ottumwa, Iowa, Mr. Bryan said: "My friends, you have been told that I am a dangerous man. There is nothing in my past life, either public or private, that justifies any citizen in saying that my election would be a menace to law and order, or to our form of government, or to the welfare of society; but there is much in what I have said and done to create a suspicion that my election would be a menace to those who have been living on what other people have earned."

The Meanest Criminal.

A few years ago a man known the country over, stood before a New York justice awaiting sentence. As he listened to the words that the justice pronounced, he heard himself denounced as the meanest criminal alive. He was sent to Sing Sing for a year and a half, and all the time he was there the words "meanest criminal" rang in his ears. He came forth from Sing Sing, went to luxuriously furnished apartments in a New York hotel, but still the awful words continually haunted him. The other day with these same words still on his mind, he stood before a looking glass and blew out his brains. That man was Al Adams, the policy king.

Of all New York gamblers Adams was undoubtedly the meanest. From mites of the poor, the dollars of the laboring man, he amassed a fortune amounting to millions. On every side were men and women who had contributed to his wealth, but he never appreciated the harm he had done until he was told by the justice on the bench that he was the meanest criminal alive.
From that moment he knew himself to be a marked man, a social outcast, a hunted prey. Life was not worth living. Even his millions did not make it worth living.

When Adams came out of Sing Sing he missed his one opportunity to reclaim himself. He could have easily abandoned his former life and began a new one, but he chose to pursue the old course, and his choice was fatal from the start; for being a marked man he was always under the espionage of the police. The fact that he was the meanest criminal seemed not to have dawned on him until shortly before he ended his life. Then he held himself in contempt and ended it all. A sad case, but one that has its lessons for all.

Having It "Rubbed In" On Them.

Jim Allen, of the Cynthiana Democrat, can come as near hitting the nail on the head as any newspaper man we know when he tries. For instance, when he says, "Whichever side may win in the approaching primary one thing is certain, the day of the 'boss' in politics is at end. No more will the people stand for questionable methods. The campaign now in progress is enough." The Democrats are having it "rubbed in" on them. They have been warned for the past six years. Machine methods and machine men have been exposed time after time, but won out. The limit has been reached. If reform is not effected within the party it is a question of only a short time until the Republicans will carry the State."
